Broken Bridges

-PRAJAKTA PRATAP PRABHU GAUNKER

Broken bridges
Whisper stories...
Some we see,
Some we hear,
Some that were
Left halfway—
Unseen and untold.

This poem beautifully captures the silent stories and unfinished journeys that remain etched in memory.

The Library Window

Through every shelf, a window wide
To lands unknown, I step inside
No passport, ticket, coin, or key
Just open a book - and I am free

A cover closed may seem so small
Yet inside waits a world for all.
Adventure hides where pages bend
A story starts, but never ends

One library card, so plain, so small,
Yet it can open the doors to all.
A universe tucked in paper and ink
Far greater than we can dream or think

Not all roads are made of stone,
Some begin when you're alone.
A single chapter, crisp and new
Can take you farther than a view.
